Kurzbeschreibung A good boy meets a bad boy. Someone's losing a halo. FBI special agent Daniel O'Pray is a straight shooter both in and out of bed. But things get a little weird when Danny is tasked to be the bait in a sting involving the owner of Philadelphia's most notorious leather bar. One out-of-control moment with nightclub owner Alexi Romanov throws Danny into a tailspin. Sexuality included. Worse, Romanov is a prime suspect in an extortion ring Danny is investigating. And Danny can't get enough of him. Danny has spent his life following the rules. So why does breaking them for Alexi feel so damn good? Lines are blurring, putting Danny's career and his life at risk. His heart, well, that's in jeopardy, too. BAIT is a 77,000 word novel of romantic suspense. It is intended for mature audiences.

ber den Autor und weitere Mitwirkende Lissa Ford is a sucker for hot guys and a happy ending. Thus writing m/m romances is her idea of a perfect day. A transplanted California girl in snowy upstate New York, Lissa spends way too much time online and trying to keep her cat from destroying the furniture. She's kind of old school in that she loves email from readers, so shoot her a line at LissaFordBooks@gmail.com.
